Subject: Polyethylene Prices

Dear Customer:

After a recent decline in Polyethylene prices, all major resin suppliers have notified the market of two scheduled 2009 price increases. The first increase was announced for 7 cents on January 1 and the second for 5 cents on February 1.

As a result of these resin increases, Spartech Plastics will increase the selling price of all sheet and rollstock products by $0.07 per pound effective with shipments on or after February 1, 2009, and by $.05 per pound for shipments on or after March 1 2009.

Obviously we are all experiencing unprecedented volatility in relation to supply and demand economics. The global recession and has put further cost and margin pressure on all manufacturers throughout the supply chain. We are very active in our efforts to manage and control these costs, and their impact to our customers. We will keep you informed of any changes in magnitude and timing as definitive information is made available.

Sincerely,

Tom Gavinski
